GREAT REFORM MEETING.
SEPARATE SCHOOL QUESTION.

Meredith's Platform Demolished and a Homemade Tory Coffin Exhibited.

On Saturday afternoon last Hon. C. Drury, Minister of Agriculture, visited Napanee. The reformers of the town arranged for a reception at the station, and engaged the services of the town band, who attended and discoursed sweet music at the station and in the procession from thence to the opera house. Just after the procession started from the station a man driving a cart with the resemblance of a coffin on it got in front of the band wagon and was proceeding with much satisfaction to himself and some of the Tory party to head the procession. On the coffin in white letters appeared the words, "Poor Oliver is dead. Funeral on 5th of June." Reaching the market square Mr. Parks took the horse by the head and steered the animal and vehicle out of the line of the procession. At the same time Councillor Stevens handled the make up of a coffin and threw it to the ground, when it collapsed as completely as the Meredith party will on the 5th day of June. The procession then proceeded to the opera house without further incident of note. The opera house was soon after filled with a appreciative and orderly audience.

Mr. D. W. Allison, as chairman made few opening remarks in introducing speakers, and spoke of his pleasure introducing to their notice a farmer. was the farmers who had made this country and it was now time they should around them and see who was run this Canada of ours, and where the fa was drifting. The farmers had n. built up this country. The grandfathers the first speaker had been among the settlers and had helped to build the schoolhouse. The electors of Le ments were so framed as to enable some one to coerce the Catholic. But when it is known that it was absolutely necessary that the ratepayer must notify the clerk in writing, it was easily understood that his action must be voluntary. The inflammatory addresses of Mr. Meredith and the race and creed cry were repugnant to his feelings, and he did not like dealing with them. But they must be answered. The impression Mr. Meredith sought to leave was that the Catholics were under the domination of the priests. These inflammatory appeals were made to Protestants to create an antagonistic religious feeling. He was sure the common sense of the people would guide them in the matter of their relation to their pastor, and whatever the arrangements were was a matter outside people had nothing to do with. The law had nothing to do with any such arrangement. One religious body had the same rights and privileges as another. Mr. Meredith would, however, try and impress the people with a feeling that the law did make a difference. And the interperate speeches made on this creed question were all delivered to inflame the prejudices of the Protestants. Hon. Mr. Mowat and his government denied any pandering to church or creed. So far as the patronage of the government was concerned, the Roman Catholics were fairly titled to more than they were receiving. Mowat and his colleagues had endeavored to give justice to every church, and at reason Mr. Mowat was the true Righter. (Applause). With regard to French school controversy, Mr. Ross is fully instrumental in securing a bettification for teachers, who must pass an examination in English. Mr. Mowat, a Frenchman, in the House of Commons, said his countrymen all wanted to be English language. It was the language of commerce, the language of this country, and therefore a necessity for all men, whether French or English. It is also necessary that in French the teacher should know that language in a school say of fifty little ones dith himself has declared that the Ontario school system was the best in the world. He has admitted that separate schools cannot be abolished, and he knows that he cannot do away with them. His objections are that the Catholics are receiving favors, but the facts were the other way, for if anything was wrong it was that the Catholics were not getting all that was justly due them. He did not for one moment believe that the people of this province had so far forgotten themselves as to allow an honest government to be defeated. It was said Meredith had received new light. Where had he this new light? Was it born of the fact that he could not successfully work the Irish Catholic elector? Then with regard to the government buildings. Mr. Waite, the architect, was also the architect of many other buildings in Toronto, including the Mail office. Mr. Clute concluded his remarks with a grand peroration, and the audience cheered lustily. Three cheers for Aylsworth, for Mowat, and for the Queen, brought a successful meeting to a close.

THE CAMPAIGN.

Views of an Old Reformer.

To THE EDITOR:—Four years ago James L. Hughes mounted the Protestant horse to oust the Mowat Government, with the permission of the then Board of School Trustees. When he was through this, not having succeeded, he settled down to work again. When pay day came the chairman, an honest man, refused to sign his cheque for neglect of duty, but the Board passed it. That is the way the School Board does business in this city. This year he is out on the Equal Rights ticket to oust the Mowat Government. I see that on the Sabbath he was to deliver a lecture in Shaftesbury Hall on "Politics from the Standpoint of Christianity." Now, sir, if these men had lived in Canada sixty years ago they would have known what kind of equal rights, either civil or religious, we had at that period. The first man who got an Act passed in the old Toronto Parliament to enable a so-called "dissenting" minister to perform the marriage ceremony, or to baptise a child, to hold a piece of land to build a church on, or a plot to bury their dead, was Marshall S. Bidwell, of Kingston, a colleague of the Hon. Robert Baldwin, the veteran Reform leader. Now that Parliament was Reform till 1836. Sir Francis Bond Head and his five executive Councillors by bribery turned the elections, and the Parliament then elected refused Wm. Lyon Mackenzie a seat in the House, after being elected four times, and threw his type and press in the lake. That Parliament brought about the rebellion, and the rebellion got us responsible government, and responsible government gave us equal rights by placing honest men in power. I will withhold the names of those who were bribed unless I am pressed for them; but there are plenty yet living who know them. Now, sir, James L. Hughes and the Meredithites raise the question of Equal Rights now in consequence of the agitation in connection with the Jesuit Estates Act of the Province of Quebec, which we have nothing to do with. Mr. Mercier had, in my opinion, however, as much right to sell the lands as the Hon. Robert Baldwin had to take King's College lands and sell them and build a grand University, and endow it with the proceeds for all the people, not for a few, as it was at first. Those men who go about prating equal rights do it simply to obtain power in order that they may plunder the country. They have no chance to get power by honest means. Sir, I have watched the Tories for sixty years. They have always resorted to dishonest tricks. This Equal Rights question is the last one they have hatched. Other instances of their rascality I need not enumerate, but it seems passing strange that you can find men dishonest enough to stand out in daylight and attack a Government with such a record as that of Ontario has. Even The Mail, as bad as it is, admits it is an honest government, and suitably managed. When enemies praise it, I think it must be pretty nearly right. Now, sir, I make the broad statement, fearless of Newburgh.

On Monday 26th inst. quite a number attended the celebration at Tweed. The Newburgh B. B. C. were there and scored another victory with the Tweed team. Newburgh has the championship of the counties of Hastings and Lennox and Addington. Although there were some good plays made yet the game was much one sided, Newburgh holding the Tweedites to one run until the seventh innings, when the Newburgh boys played careless and the Tweed boys in the seventh and eighth innings scored six runs. The chief features of the game were, Dagget's home run by knocking the ball over a barbed wire fence which could not be climbed, thus keeping Thompson from fielding the ball, Shorey's three bagger and foul hit, which was the largest hit made on the ground, Hope's pitching and good fielding on both sides. The following is the score:

The Spencer Hill road job is still the gossip of the neighborhood, and the great question is when shall the end be, and who is to blame. It is certainly too bad that such hard feelings have sprung up over such a trifling matter.
Guard well the tongue, how easily there slips An angry word between ill guarded lips, And one sharp word, as surely as a blow, May alter love to hate, a friend to foe.
How hard it is that friendship to renew, Whence one brief word of careless anger flew, And harder still to stifle your regret, And yet more hard the quarrel to forget!
Remember, then, he has the right to boast Who bears not, he who seeks revenge the most, Remember, words of hate as well as love Are registered indelibly above.

Things are growing finely and there is prospects now of an abundant crop.
A very nice gathering assembled on Monday evening in the White Church to hear Rev. C. O. Johnston's lecture on "Wisdom and Folly," and were pleasingly and profitably entertained. The lecture was full of witty and wise thoughts, forcibly put. The choir rendered valuable assistance.
A very pleasing part of the entertainment was the presentation of a silver mug and water pitcher to Miss Blanche Fralick the late organist, who has taken a situation in Brockville for a time. The address was read by Miss Emma Garrison and the gift was presented by Miss Ida Van-Slyck, the two young ladies who collected the money. The following is the address:
To Miss Blanche Fralick.
Dear Friend and Fellow worker in the Lord's Vineyard,—We are glad that you have given us the opportunity to say to you that we greatly appreciate your service rendered during the last two years as our organist, and for our part regret your removal, but if it be for the glory

...a teacher instruct them at all

 ew. The Meredith platform was of clap-trap, and the whole affair hing but an election cry of which months time the Tories would be ashamed. He was proud to eulo-Hon. Oliver Mowat, and it would deplorable calamity to this province if should be defeated. (Applause).

Mr. B. E. Aylsworth was next introducto the meeting by the chairman, and he
 as received with enthusiastic applause.
 He said he was before them asking their suffrage as a supporter of the Mowat government. (Cheers). He had many reasons for supporting so good a government, and one was the aid it had given to farmers in so many ways—the Model Farm, the Farmers' Institute, Agricultural Shows and a Minister of Agriculture. He had endeavored to see the whole of the electorate during the campaign, and if any one was missed it was no fault of his. He asked for their cordial support. (Applause).

Mr. H. M. Deroche followed and said he would not occupy much time. The Separate school question had been fully answered by Mr. Drury. It was freely asserted that old Reformers were going to quit Mowat, but he could not and did not believe it; rather was it not time and was it not true that a great many respectable Conservatives were going to support Mr.
 Mowat and the best government of this or any time. (Applause). The policy of the Conservatives in the past had always been seen the Mowat government was an honest one, a true Equal Rights government, the Catholics of this Province were giving it their support. If there was one plan of campaign more contemptible than another it was this creed appeal to the passions of the people. The electors of Lennox he was sure would not be led astray by such meanness. The idea of exhibiting a picture of the Virgin Mary to a meeting in a schoolhouse to influence Protestant feeling.
 Could anything be more ignoble or base.
 This was the best evidence as to the character of Meredith's following. Some people said they endorsed Meredith's platform. Which platform? (Loud laughter).
 The facts for Irish electors. Mr. Creighton at Owen Sound denied any knowledge of this delectable platform; but a person present recalled to Mr. Creighton's memory the fact that he ordered a distribution of the same to be made. Apart from this question of race and creed, was not the Mowat government entitled to their support? See what a number of good acts and what an amount of good legislation he had given to the people. We all owe a deep debt of gratitude to Mr. Mowat. The young men of this province especially ought to vote for Mowat, for had he not given them the practice which the Conservatives at Ottawa refuse to entrust them with. Conservative governments rely on the property qualification, but Mr. Mowat relies on the man. The young men of our country are called upon to fight its battles and they should have the right to help make its laws. The duty of the day was to be active and mark their ballots for B.
 E. Aylsworth and on June 5th he would be elected. (Cheers).

Mr. Clute was the next speaker and said he was glad to address such a grand audience on behalf of a man who was brought up among them and with whom they were well acquainted. (Cheers). He was also glad to speak for Mowat. In the annals of responsible government there was no similar record. The experience gained in many years has enabled him to govern this province well and wisely and economically.
 The farmers should consider this, when every dollar they got in these days was earned by hard labor, when they were being drained by the government at Ottawa and the N. P. Was it feasible that they were going to vote against an old and tried and trusted servant who had done a great deal for them, and put the management of public affairs into incompetent and "green hands"? Would any one do that in his private business? The platform of Mr.
 Meredith would not bear criticism. Take the timber limits and discuss the two policies. The Conservatives sell at $5 per square mile. Mr. Mowat puts the limits up at auction, and the average price realized has been $7 per square mile. There are no Rykerts therefore in the legislature of Ontario. The first named is the Conservative policy, but the last is the policy which conserves the timber for us and our children. The license question was another grievance. Under the old system, to which Mr. Meredith seeks to revert, there were innumerable shebangs, but now we have fewer licenses and much better order.
 The present was the best licensing system that ever had. As to school matters, Mere-

...successful contradiction, that on this Continent its equal cannot be found. There is no State in the American Union that is out of debt. There is no Province of this Dominion that is out of debt except Ontario, which has a surplus of over six millions of dollars, and no Province has paid out half as much for improving the country, for taking care of the helpless, and for educational purposes as has Ontario. Compare the ability of the men who compose the Government of Ontario with those of the Opposition. What have you? In the Opposition you find nothing but men who have resorted to trickery in order to gain power.
 They know there is a good surplus and they want to steal it. Now, I wish as an old Reformer to bid the people beware of Tory wolves in sheep's clothing. As well may a leopard change his spots or an Ethiopian his skin
 as a dyed-in-the-wool Tory advocate honest, Liberal principles. Their whole legislation when in power is class legislation—legislation not for the many, but for the few.
 That is Toryism wherever you find it. Now, sir, I wish to say a few words about what the Mowat Government has done for Provincial rights. They have fought the whole Dominion Government before the Privy Council in eight law suits, the last one that of the St. Catharines Milling Company, in which Dalton McCarthy figured to the tune of $33,500. Who was to blame for that? I say Sir John Macdonald's Government. They sold the timber limits that belonged to Ontario. Had we not had an honest Government to look after our rights, John A. would have plundered the Province.
 Look at the Rykert affair and another just leaked out in Quebec Province.
 The Dominion Government is like an old powder-stored building, rotting down from its own weight of rascality. Now, sir, compare the Opposition in the Dominion House with the "noodle-heads" who vote through thick and thin for such a Government. Take one instance, that of giving the seat to Baird instead of to the man who had the majority of votes, and so robbing the people of their rights. That alone is enough to damn them in the eyes of any honest man. Had we not had the cleverest men this Continent produces to contend with the corrupt Government where would we be now? Sir, I just want to say what I heard Sir John Macdonald say after he had hatched the N. P.: "Elect me and you will have no more hard times.
 You will have lots of money, big wages and high prices for grain." Oh, how many men were duped! Then they passed the most infamous Franchise Act that ever was put on a statute book in order to rob the people of their rights and to keep in power to plunder the country of its timber limits and wealth; and always a majority of noodle-heads were found to keep Sir John in power. Now, sir, I venture to say you cannot find in any representative country so corrupt a Government as that of the Dominion of Canada.
 The nearest was that of the old Family Compact. They stole all they could, but there was less to steal. I saw the report of Sir Francis Hincks, the first Minister of Finance under the Baldwin Administration.
 It disclosed a fearful amount of thievery. Sir, were the days of Toryism in Canada. Pardon me for intruding on your space. E. WESLEY.

No. 12 Argyle street, May 5.

LONDON, May 21.—The Newfoundland delegates had an interview yesterday with Lord Knutsford, the Colonial Secretary, at which the fishery question was fully discussed. The delegates will have another interview with the Colonial Secretary after Whitsuntide. The Chronicle publishes an account of an interview with the Newfoundland delegates on the fishery question. In the opinion of the delegates, a settlement might be arrived at by France abolishing the bounty system in return for the repeal of the Bait Act. In this way, they argued, the value of the French shore claims as a lever on the bait question would be destroyed, and the way would be paved to the buying out of the French claims, which matter could be arranged by arbitration. The delegates protested against British officers aiding and defending French aggression.
 They declared that there would be no thought of annexation to the United States unless England neglected colonial interests.
 The delegates further declared that it was a fallacy to suppose that France valued the shore as the nursery of her navy, because the naval training ground was really on the high seas in the vicinity of the grand bank.
 The point aimed at by France, according to the delegates, is to secure unrestricted access to the bait supply.

 shadow the final result, as it is frequently the unexpected that happens.

Mrs. D. W. Allison and Mrs. Duffett and other elect ladies are interesting themselves to organize among the young people an Anti Slang Society. Any effort of this kind to promote purity of speech and conduct among the young cannot be too highly commended.

Farmers have been greatly delayed in their planting operations by the recent rains, although the crops on the whole are looking very promising. There is the prospect of another abundant crop of hay. It is said that D. W. Allison will take off at least 200 tons from his Globe farm alone.
 He is pushing forward his new barn, which will be over 200 feet long, to make storage room.

(From another Correspondent.)

We have had nice showers of rain lately.
 The grain is growing fine.

Mr. Thos. Bretler is the father of a fine young son. Shake Tom.

Rumour says Mr. J. B. Allison is to take to himself a wife this summer.

Messrs. D. W. and J. B. Allison expect friends in California to visit them shortly.

Mr. M. Pollard received a severe kick from a cow he was milking, on Monday night.

Jack, you must do a little better than you did on the 21th, or you wont get the black eyed girl.

Mr. W. S. Duffett has a fine store; a handsome dressmaker, and will soon have a first class tailor.

Hurrah for Aylsworth! Go in Bowen!
 All the people of this burgh wish you luck, and will do all they can to put you in Len-nox's chair in the Provincial parliament.

Denbigh.

Most of our farmers are now done with their spring's seedling. There has been considerable more wheat sown than usual.

Although no correspondence from Denbigh has appeared in the columns of The Express for some time, it has not been for want of interesting news, but rather for want of time to report.

Mr. Stein's sawmill, under the management of Mr. Wm. Kerr, is turning out a large amount of sawn lumber this spring, and will be able to supply all local demands for building material this year.

Our roads have been in a dreadful condition this spring, but they are getting a little dryer now, and it is to be hoped that the expenditure of the various government and municipal grants will make them a little more passable.

The Rev. G. Brackebusch will leave in a few days for Badew, Waterloo Co., Ont., where he will attend the sessions of the Lutheran Synod of Canada, which begins on the 29th inst. He will not be accompanied by a lay delegate this year.

Our present miller, Mr. Emil Warlich, who has rented the grist mill from Mr. P.
 Stein for a term of years, has been doing a very good business during the past winter, and has succeeded, so far, in giving better satisfaction than any of his predecessors.

Our public school under the able management of Miss C. Vandebogart is progressing favorably, and has now a larger attendance than it ever had before. Our trustees deserve every praise for securing to this section the services of so able and popular a teacher.

Mr. John Quackenbush has sold his hotel in our village to Mr. James Youman, who has already succeeded in making himself very popular with the neighbors and the travelling public. Mr. Quackenbush has rented a farm from Mr. Gustav Stein, on the mill road, south of the village.

A public meeting was held last Friday evening at the Orange hall in the interest of Mr. Frank Halliday. Mr. Halliday made a very able address, showing and convincing nearly every one present of the soundness of the general policy of the present administration. The meeting passed off very orderly, as public meetings in this municipality nearly always do, and was closed at a late hour with a unanimous "Hurrah for Halliday and Good Government."

Our village blacksmith, Mr. D. Maybee, has struck work, much to the inconvenience of everybody in this vicinity, and accepted a situation with Wm. Caldwell, of Lanark, at Carleton Place. As "Dave" was a most genial fellow, a pleasant neighbor, and a crack blacksmith, we miss him very much, and hope that he will soon return. His alleged chief reason for the temporary change is that owing to the hard times at present a large number of his customers are slow to pay, a complaint which is echoed by every business man in this part of the country.

...our heavenly Master and your own welfare we would not be so selfish as to wish it otherwise.

This small gift we in behalf of the congregation present you to-day is simply a token, and will serve to remind you of past services, old faces and opportunities we have enjoyed together.

Craving God's blessing in your behalf we wish you well.

Miss Fralick was taken by surprise, but nevertheless she collected herself sufficiently to make a very nice and appropriate acknowledgment.

 tween here and that favorite summer resort

A very large crowd in town on Saturday.
 The day was exceedingly fine and the celebration was carried on without any disturbance. The base ball match between P.
 H. school team and Trenton's Park Nine with some of the best of that town's players resulted in a defeat of P. H. school by unfair umpiring.

On Monday was played here a very interesting game of base ball between "P. H.
 S. team" and "Pictou (town) team." The game was called at 2:30 p. m., when Captains Austin, of P. H. S., and Irvine, of Town team, tossed for choice. It was won by Austin and he chose the field and Town went to bat. The score is as follows:

NAPANEE, FRIDAY, MAY 30, 1890

The re-election of Rykert by the reduced majority of 37 is no credit to the Conservative party.

The Conservative coffin of this town is like the platform of Mr. Meredith—neither will bear handling.

The manufacturers of the coffin are, we understand, taking up a subscription to buy mourning for themselves to wear on the 5th day of June.

The Equal Rights Association which is running four or five candidates, has a sum of $3,500 with which to carry on the campaign. The total expenses of the Reform party in the last campaign were under $5,000.

COUNCILLOR STEVENS was the man

the interests of Ontario be safe in Mr. Meredith's hands after such truckling to Ottawa? Would it be wise to place in his hands the wealth of Ontario? Would it be wise to entrust Mr. Meredith with the forest and mineral wealth of Ontario, when he supports the chieftain who has declared that "NOT A STICK OF TIMBER, NOT AN ACRE OF LAND, NOT A POUND OF MINERALS in the disputed territory should ever belong to Ontario?" Go to the polls on the 5th day of June and record your votes in favor of "AYLSWORTH for LENNOX" and "HALLIDAY for ADDINGTON," and thus support good government in Ontario!

MR. MEREDITH and his friends are still working the race and creed cry for all it is worth, in the hope that they may be able to win over enough of Mr. Mowat's supporters who are not fully informed on the school question, to carry himself and his party into power. Mr. Meredith now pretends to be dreadfully afraid that Protestantism is in danger, and his one object seems to be to make his co-religionists think so too. The prize he is striving for is a big one—the Premiership of Ontario, and he knows he has not a ghost of a show for getting there unless he can work upon the prejudices of those who do not know that Mr. Mowat's government had actually taken steps to make English the language taught in every school as early as 1885, long before Mr. Meredith and his party had even mooted the subject. Mr. Meredith has not always been the great champion of Protestant principles he now wishes the people to believe him to be. In 1883 he tried to get into power by working the Catholic vote, in the same way that he is now trying to work the Protestant vote. Then he got Mr. Kirwan to write a pamphlet to the Catholic electors, telling them that they need not expect justice from Mr. Mowat, and further, he offered the Catholics two of the positions in his government if D. J. O'Donoghoe would vote no confidence in the Mowat government when required to do so. Mr. O'Donoghoe was promised one of the positions, and he was to be secured a walkover at Ottawa, when seeking reelection. These facts are matters of history. Mr. O'Donoghoe having established the statements here made upon oath. Mr. Meredith is now asking you to trust him with the government of the Province. Do you think he would be the champion of Protestantism to-day if the Kirwan "facts for the Irish Catholic electors" had succeeded in placing him in power? Not a bit of it. He does not care a button for Protestant or any other principles; but he does care for office, and he wants to get there very badly. Mark your ballots for Aylsworth and Halliday, and let the grand old counties of Lennox and Addington stand in line in favor of honest government.

THE Empire has a way of its own of collecting campaign funds and also of increasing the circulation of the paper. The Empire it seems was sent to some Orangemen in East Hastings who endured the infliction for a season and then sent a letter to Mr. Hudson asking relief. We print Mr. Hudson's letter:

ROSLIN, September 16th, 1889.

DEAR SIR,—I received your letter of the 12th inst., signed by you, and in reply I will explain matters how The Empire came to be sent. When the House opened last January. Mr. Creighton, M.P.P., the manager of the paper, called a meeting of

of worship or burial. When the United States, under the terms of this act, began proceedings to confiscate about $750,000 worth of property belonging to the church, the Mormons immediately entered suit to have Edwards law declared unconstitutional. It was argued before the Supreme court in their behalf that congress, by the dissolution of the church corporation, had assumed judicial powers, and that the act of the legislative assembly at Utah incorporating the church constituted a contract which could not be impaired by congress under its authority to repeal territorial enactments. It was also held that the doctrine of escheat was alien to the spirit of free institutions, and that it had never been applied in this country to a church or charitable corporation. On the part of the United States, it was contended that congress had authority to repeal all territorial enactments; that the act incorporating the church was invalid as to an attempt to establish a religion contrary to the provisions of the constitution, and that, moreover, the charter should be annulled for abuse of the granted rights. As, when the church corporation was dissolved, there was no one to whom to turn over the property, it was properly escheated to the United States. Justice Bradley delivered the opinion.

Grain Men Gloomy.

A newspaper reporter recently interviewed a number of grain shippers as to the prospects of grain shipments. They all take a gloomy view of the situation. One shipper, after pointing out that Montreal had lost her position as a grain shipping port, said: "What we need is free trade, and until we get it we must expect our grain men to go to the wall." Another shipper said: "The outlook is anything but bright." The head of a large shipping firm said there was no Canadian wheat being shipped. It was all American. A fourth shipper said: "Never in the history of Canada has the outlook been so gloomy. Montreal should be one of the finest shipping ports on this side of the ocean, yet, thanks to the fact that we are not a free trade country, Montreal is fast losing her ground. It may not seem right for a citizen of Montreal to talk this way, yet it is the truth, and sooner or latter it must be known. As things stand now the American has every advantage over us, and what the end will be God only knows."

WHAT A PETERBORO LADY PHILANTHROPIST HAS DONE WITH HER WEALTH

PETERBORO, May 20.—The will of the late Charlotte Jane Nicholls, reputed to be the richest woman in Canada, and who died here last week, was read to the relatives on Saturday afternoon. The relatives and friends were given the sum of $454,800, distributed in legacies ranging from $50,000 down to $1,000, while the public and charitable bequests amounted to $293,000. This makes a total of $747,000 disposed of by the will, and it is known that during the last few weeks the deceased lady had given

STEALING DIAMONDS.

HOW THE GEMS ARE HIDDEN BY KAFFIR WORKMEN.

Curious Detective Work Done to Prevent the Abstraction of Valuable Bits of Carbon—Some of the Singular Phases of the "I. D. B." Business and the Odd Expedients Whereby It Is Queered.

IN Kimberley, South Africa, the commissioner of the Pall Mall Gazette, who is now making his leisurely tour around the world, has been investigating the great industry of stealing diamonds. His discoveries are so curious that The Times reproduced in full that part of the Gazette's article which refers to the illicit capture of diamonds and the governmental capture of diamond-thieves.

And now for the tricks of the trade and the counter tricks employed by the Kaffirs and Leccops of Cape Colony. Things are very different now from the days when the "kopee wallpaper" from Houndsditch or Petticoat Lane could loaf about the mines with a pocketful of cash and buy hand over hand from half-drunken natives in the kaffir canteen. Under the "compound system" the kaffir contracts for three months to work, board, and lodge with the company. When not at work he spends all his time eating, sleeping, or playing games in a spacious quadrangle built round with iron sheds. For that time he is cut off from the outer world and from drink stronger than ginger-beer. His few needs in the way of food and clothes he can supply within at cost price. On his way to and from the mine he is strictly watched. So, too, while at work underground, where he gayly sweats away from 6 to 6 on bread, and soup, and mealies for £1 to £2 a week. Fresh from the mine he has to pass the ordeal of the searching room, where, naked as he was born, he undergoes a scrutiny of mouth, ears, nose, hair (or, rather, scrub), armpits—every conceivable or inconceivable lodgment for a diamond—goes through certain gymnastic exercises, and makes way for the next. The whole performance is absolutely the most extraordinary thing I ever saw in my life. Further description would encroach upon taceada. I remember remarking to my cicerone, "It's lucky you have black labor handy—no white would stand this sort of thing for any wages under the SUN." Indeed, though the white overseers are nominally liable, if suspected, to a similar scrutiny, there was riot and bloodshed once at Kimberley when it was proposed to impose on whites something of the sort as a matter of routine. Modesty, as Darwin proved, is a question of etiquette, and that of the kaffir is not that of Mr. Horsley. Yet he, too, has his own; and it is hard to believe, little as the "boys" seem to care, that there is not something degrading about such a performance. However, it makes it possible to have a diamond concealed a person, otherwise than inside.

THE SEARCH FOR HIDDEN GEMS.

Let us follow such a diamond thief career. We will assume that the thief is a working kaffir. Of course sometimes one of the white overman with a wife and family, work hours a day, at £3 or £4 a week, ed by a practitioner, who point what safe and easy opportunities making a little competence by the sorting-tabbles. But for the is some kaffir, loading a truck the "blue" on the drying-ground when he demoralized the Conservative coffin and routed the enemy, Warden Parks, too, should be commended for his action by all right-thinking citizens.

It is generally conceded that the least sign of dissent on the part of Sir John A. Macdonald would have defeated Rykert. Instead of such dissent we find the influence of the Government was used on behalf of the boddler.

It cannot be too often repeated that Mr. Mowat, having no boddlers to provide for, has been able to appropriate during the past eighteen years more than thirty-three millions of dollars to the improvement and development of Ontario, and to the lightning of the burden of local taxation.

Time is short and much work remains to be done in the interest of good government. The prospects of Messrs. Aylsworth and Halliday for election are very cheering. All that is wanted is that all who believe in Equal Rights to all should get to work and try to induce some waverer to vote for the best interest of his Province.

FACTS for Irish Electors was one of the incidents alluded to in the Opera Hall on Saturday last. Mr. Meredith, Mr. Creighton and others deny any knowledge of the document. Mr. Creighton did this at Owen Sound. But when Mr. Creighton had made his denial Mr. Patrick Malone, of the Township of Sullivan stepped upon the platform and said: "I was in Owen Sound during the election contest in 1863. A Mr. Maran and I drove to Mr. Creighton's office; the Times office; and were there given bundles of these Facts for Irish Electors; and were told to distribute them well at the little Catholic church at Griffith's Corners."

MOWAT'S hour came when he was elevated to the bench of his Province, which he adorned for years. His hour came when, at the call of his Province, he laid aside the ermine of the judicial appointment and grasped with a steady hand and a clear brain the helm of the Provincialship. His hour came when, at the expiration of the first Parliament, he was called upon in 1875 to render an account of his stewardship and received endorsement. "Well done, good and faithful servant." His hour came in 1879, and again his course was endorsed. In 1883 his hour came once more, and although on that occasion William Ralph Meredith endeavored to make capital out of the "Facts for the Irish Electors," Ontario remained loyal to her most patriotic son. His hour came in 1886, when Meredith, charged with the failure of his attempt of '83, changed front in the matter of religious intolerance and vainly put on boots and spurs to ride the Protestant horse. The intelligent, broad-minded electorate would have none of it, and again was Mowat endorsed. His hour has again come, and, as of yore, a palm of victory awaits him on the 5th of June.

GENTLEMEN—Electors of the Ridings of Lennox and Addington, can you conscientiously cast your votes in favor of Mr. Meredith, who was hand-in-glove with Sir John A. Macdonald, supporting him EVEN WHEN HE GAVE AWAY PART OF OUR TERRITORY TO THE PROVINCE OF MANITOBA? Would

At that meeting he made this suggestion, asking each member to pay in $25 each, and he would send fifty copies to the names we would give him in each constituency the balance of the year. He gave his reason for asking this; he said that he wanted to send the paper in places where no Empire was taken to get it established, as it was a new paper, and he promised if each member paid in $25 he would give a full report of all proceedings during the session. We all paid in our money, and I had the paper sent to names I could think of at the time, in places where I thought no Empire was taken. The course that the Empire has taken since that time in some questions does not suit me, and I feel like myself that it is not doing right for the Protestant people of this Province. My intentions at the time were for good and not for any harm. I am glad you have written me. I will write to the manager and show him that the course he is taken with and the way the paper is edited does not suit the people. Those persons that are taking it now, if they wish it stopped before the end of the year, let me know and I will stop it, or they can order it stopped themselves. You can see how simply I got into it, and I can assure you and the other friends my intentions were for good, but the paper has not done its duty.

Your obedient servant,
W. P. HUDSON.

NEWS OF THE WORLD.

Nansen Polar Expedition.

LONDON, May 19.—There is much popular and scientific interest here over the Nansen expedition in search of the North Pole, which is soon to set out from Christiania. The route to be followed is based upon the theory that the articles belonging to the Jeannette, found on the 18th of June, three years after the disaster to that ship, at a point directly opposite the pole, must have followed a supposed subarctic current, which, leaving the archipelago at New Siberia, must have conveyed them to the Greenland colony, where they were found at a place called Julian Shaab. The meteorological bureau at Christiania, after three years' study, has concluded that a direct route exists, crossing the polar regions. The Nansen will try this route, starting near the point where the Jeannette was plucked by the ice, and going to the opposite point, where the articles were found.

The Duke's Visit.

VANCOUVER, B. C., May 22.—A dreary rain which prevailed this morning had the effect of dampening, in a manner, the enthusiasm of Vancouver's welcome to the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall, who arrived from Victoria by Canadian Pacific steamer "Abyssinia" at eleven o'clock. The Royal party was met at the dock by Mayor Oppenheimer and the City Council, forming a reception committee, with resident officers of the C. P. R., who extend to them the hospitality of this city. An address expressing Vancouver's loyalty and her citizens' pleasure at the honor of the visit from Royalty, was read by Mayor Oppenheimer and in reply the Prince thanked Vancouver for the cordial welcome extended to himself and his Royal consort. He was glad, he said, to find himself once more on Canadian soil. "I was quite a new experience for him to come into a city only three years of age, and he was perfectly astounded."

Mormonism is Doomed.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—The Supreme court of the United States to-day rendered an opinion of vital interest to the Mormon church in the suit of the church of Latter Day Saints against the United States, which comes to there on appeal from the decision of the Supreme court of Utah in favor of the United States. This court affirms that judgment. The case grows out of the passage of the Edmunds anti-polygamy law by the forty-ninth congress. This law, among other things, dissolved the Mormon church corporation, annulled its charter, directed the appointment of a receiver to wind up its affairs and escheated to the United States all the real estate owned by the church in excess of $50,000 which was not, on the date of the passage of the act, held for purposes amounting to between $200,000 and $250,000. The largest private bequests were made to her nearest relations in New York state, while some relations in the Old Country were also generously remembered. One of her last acts was to place on the collection plate of St. Andrew's church, Peterboro, a cheque for $12,000, and on the same day she gave a check for $3,000 to the St. Paul's Presbyterian church in the same place.

Death in the Niagara.

NIAGARA FALLS, May 21.—Another life came near being added yesterday to the already long list of Niagara's victims. Joseph R. Wilson, an Englishman, now residing in Charvont, Philadelphia, and stopping with his wife at the Prospect house, took a carriage yesterday morning for a drive to the whirlpool. As they were walking along the edge of the pool Mr. Louis Sinclair, of Daydawn, Netherall Gardens, South Hampstead, England, passed them, left the path and scrambled over some rocks below the pathway. He was so ambitious to obtain an unobstructed view that he jumped on a large rock a few feet out in the river, not aware of the treacherous nature of the current. He had no sooner gained his position than the water boiled up about him and had risen above his knees, threatening to sweep him away. The situation was terrible. The poor man was spell-bound. Mr. Wilson rushed to the rescue. He pulled off his overcoat, twisted it and threw one end to Sinclair, who caught it and was pulled ashore. The excitement was so great that congratulations were not thought of. Mr. Sinclair returned to his hotel, changed his clothes and called on Mr. Wilson at the Prospect house to sincerely thank him for his deliverance. He said no one at that terrific moment could imagine his feelings. He never expected to see his wife and three children again. Mrs. Wilson is ill from the excitement.

The Crop of Scandals.

This session of the Dominion Parliament has been remarkable for the number of scandals which have been unearthed and investigated. The principal one, which stands out as the most conspicuous affecting a member of Parliament, is the Rykert timber limit case, by which that individual through his influence as a member received $74,000 in his wife's name as his share of the spoil. The Committee on Privileges and Elections unanimously adopted Mr. Blake's report which found Mr. Rykert guilty. Next in importance was the Bremner fur case, and the committee which investigated it also found General Middleton guilty of disposing of property to which he had no right. Both these reports when presented to the House were unanimously adopted, which, considering their nature, is a very rare occurrence in Parliamentary history. Then following up these scandals was that of the Direct Dead Meat Company, with which Sir Hector Langevin's name is connected. The Carapet Railway, in which Mr. Burns, a member, is the principal figure head; the McGreevy case, in which the member for Quebec West is deeply concerned. These and minor other scandals have been brought to light mainly through the efforts of the Opposition. We are free to say that though no member of the Government may have been directly implicated in them, yet its policy has been the primary cause of nearly all these discreditable transactions. It must, therefore, share in the guilt which attaches to those members who have profited by such. The granting of timber limits to members or their friends, without competition, and the granting of subsidies to railways in which members are interested, in order to secure their support, it is just as "discreditable, corrupt and scandalous" as Rykert's conduct was in getting a share of the money paid for the timber limit which he secured for his friend Adams.—Guelph Mercury.

karats, glittering among its darlings. Warned by native acquiescence of evil counsels with "runner" has primed him for opportunity, our kaffir gives not a sign that might attract the eye of a seer. There the diamond lies, and the drying-ground there perhaps it lie, marking the spot against such himself or a confederate can come a fit. Or else, seizing a moment when he observed, he quietly picks the stone up his toes, and there holds it until an opportunity occurs of transferring it to his master. Once there, in a moment it is swallowed with as much nonchalance as if it were a pill. That done our kaffir can face with indifference that terrible scrutiny of which something has been said. In this way an industrious thief will sometimes accumulate within the compound a little cache of precious stones, whose hiding-place known is only to himself.

I have explained how the I. D. B. manages to have his trusted "runner" within the sacred limits of the compound itself. The runner is supplied with money to buy stones; and when he has filled his pouch he will seize some opportunity of escaping to his master, either over the compound wall or on the way to work. Or he will throw a parcel over the wall to a confederate outside. Or our kaffir, we will assume, prefers to sell his diamonds himself. He possesses his soul in patience until his three months are nearly up, then dig up his diamond or diamonds, swallows the lot, and passes gayly out with his goods packed inside him. It is true that a week before his exit he has to spend in a specially constructed room, and under circumstances of surveillance which must at least render it very difficult thus to turn the diamond into a circulating currency. Moreover, if he be at all suspected, it will avail him little to confront the custom-house of the compound with so treacherous a portmanteau as the human form divine. But, you will say, they can not test the unhappy native as Baron Munchausen did the fox. They cannot turn him inside out. Not like a stocking, perhaps. That is true. But they can put him in his hands padlocked within certain fingerless leather gloves into a small and solitary chamber, and there subject him to such physical tortures as speedily attain its end. By prescriptions of a "kind familiar to the faculty, accompanied by such a light and nourishing diet as is adapted to a febrile patient, the treatment proceeds until a satisfactory cure is effected. Valuable additions have in this way been made to the world's wealth in diamonds.

But to quit this phase of what I may term medical jurisprudence for one which is more strictly legal—suppose our diamondiferous kaffir, after all perils passed, safely at large and ready to dispose of his stolen goods. He is soon in communication with the middle man, who will, perhaps, after much haggling through a window, give him about a quarter of the stone's value, or perhaps considerably less—so much less, indeed, in some cases that honesty might have turned a better penny by giving the stone up to the company and getting the small percentage allowed on it. The next stage is getting the diamond out of the country. Griqualand West is hard upon the borders both of the Free State and the Transvaal. In the Free State with little or no machinery for enforcing it—there is a very strict diamond law. Just across the Vaal river, however, lies Christiana, where the I. D. B. can cheaply register his ill-got gains to be forwarded for shipment at Port Natal. "No questions asked" is the not very creditable rule by which both the republic and the rival colony facilitate theiving from cape territory. And so the smuggled diamond reaches the London market.

Sometimes, again, parcels are boldly sent through the Cape Town postoffice, artfully concealed by the familiar smugglers' dodges such as putting a hole inside a guileless-looking family move and filling it with stones. Or some "lady" who is in the swim takes a parcel about her person, smuggles it on ship board, and carries it to Europe with her. I find that I can myself boast the honor of having once been a fellow-voyager—Cassarene yehs—of a notorious female I. D. B. of this sort.—Chicago Times.

Moses Had Asthma.

My husband had asthma for eight years with severe cough, and his lungs also were affected. He could neither rest, work, nor get relief from any medicine he tried. Some time ago we got Bayard's Pectoral Balm, and after taking six or eight bottles his cough was entirely cured, his asthma greatly relieved, and his lungs greatly benefited.

Prof. Martin, the ex-priest who mysteriously disappeared from Montreal a short time ago, has returned to the city with his family.

As a simple, natural laxative, stomachic, blood, brain and nerve tonic, when taken as directed, the value of Burdock Blood Bitters cannot be overestimated, while as a cure for constipation, indigestion, liver diseases, impure blood, sleeplessness, nervous and sick headache, it is the best that money can buy.

COMMODORE JUNK.

CHAPTER XXIV.

"Not dying, Bart?"

"No, not exactly dying," said that worthy in a low growl; "But s'pose you shoots at and wings a gull, picks it up, and takes it, and puts it in a cage; the wound heals up, and the bird seems sound; but after a time it don't peck, and don't preen its plumes, and if it don't beat itself again the bars of the cage, it sits and looks at the sea."

"What do you mean?"

"What I says, captain; and, after a time, if you don't let it go, the gull dies."

"Then you mean that Captain Armstrong is pining away?"

"That's it."

"Has he any suspicion of who we are?"

"Not a bit."

"And you think he is suffering for want of change?"

"Course I do. Anyone would—shut up in that dark place."

"Has he complained?"

"Not he. Too brave a lad. Why not give him and his lads a boat, and let them go?"

"To come back with a strong force and destroy us."

"Ah, I never thought of that! Make him swear he wouldn't. He'd keep his word."

"But his men would not, Bart. No; he will have to stay."

"Let him loose, then, to run about the place. He can't get away."

"I am afraid."

"What of?"

"Some trouble arising. Mazzard does not like him."

"Ah! I never thought of that neither," returned Bart, gloomily. "Black Mazzard's always grumbling about his being kept."

The buccaneer took a turn or two up and down the quarters he occupied in the vast range of buildings buried in the forest, a mile back from the head of the harbor where his schooner lay; and Bart watched him curiously till he stopped, with his face twitching, and the frown deepening upon his brow.

"He will not give his word of honor not to attempt to escape, Bart," said the captain, pausing at last before his follower.

"Tar'n't likely," said Bart. "Who would? He'd get away if he could."

"The prisoners cannot escape through the forest; there is no way but the sea, and that must be properly watched. Due notice must be given to all that any attempt to escape will be followed by the punishment of death."

"I hear," said Bart. "Am I to tell the captain that?"

"No. He must know it; but I give him into your charge. You must watch over him from himself and from anyone else."

"Black Mazzard?"

"From any one likely to do him harm," said the captain, sternly. "You understand?"

"Yes. I'm going," replied Bart, in a low growl, as he gazed on his leader's eyes; and then, with a curious, thoughtful look in his own, he went out of the captain's quarters and in the direction of the prison of the king's officer.

Bart had to go down the broad steps of an extensive, open amphitheatre, whose stones were dislodged by the redundant growth of the forest; and, after crossing the vast court-yard at the bottom, to mount the steps on the other side toward where, dominating a broad terrace overshadowed by trees, stood a small, square temple, over whose doorway was carved a huge, demonic head, defaced by the action of time, but with the features still clearly marked.

As Bart neared the building a figure appeared in the doorway for a moment, and then passed out into the sunshine.

"Hallo, my lad!" it exclaimed. "You there?"

Bart nodded.

"Been putting in the last six barrels of the sloop's powder, and some of these days you'll see the sun'll set it all alight, and blow the whole place to smithereens! Where are ye going?"

"Yonder, to the prisoners."

"Poor devils!" said Dinny. "Hadn't ye better kill the lot and put 'em out of their misery? They must be tired of it, and so am I. Faix, and it's a dirty life for a man to lead!"

"Don't let the skipper hear you say that, my lad," growled Bart, "or it may be awkward for you!"

"I'll let anybody hear me!" cried Dinny. "Sure, an' it's the life of a baste to lead, and a man like that Black Mazzard bullying and finding fault. I'd have sent one of the powder-keers at his head this morning."

"Is he brave?"

"Yes, sor; and I wouldn't anger him if I were you."

"Not I," said Humphrey. "There, the sickness has passed off. Now, help me out into the sunshine."

"Help ye out?" said Dinny, looking puzzled.

"Yes; into the bright sunshine. I seem to be decaying away here, man," and the weak light will give me strength."

"Shure, an' if I do, Black Mazzard will pison me wid a pistol-ball."

"I have the captain's consent," said Humphrey.

"Sure, and ye're not deluding a boy, are ye, sor?" said Dinny.

"No, no, my man it is right. Help me; I did not know I was so weak."

"An' is it wake?" said Dinny, drawing the prisoner's arm well through his own.

"Sure, and didn't I see gallons of blood run out of ye? Faix, and there was quarts and quarts of it; and I believe ye'd have died if I hadn't nursed ye so tenderly as I did."

"My good fellow, you've been like a good angel to me," said Humphrey, feebly.

"Hah! how glorious!" he sighed, closing his eyes as they stepped out of the long corridor into the opening cut through the forest, and then between the two piles of ruins into the glorious tropic sunshine.

"Will it be too warm?" said Dinny.

"Warn! No, man, my heart has been chilled with lying there in the darkness. Take me farther out into the bright light."

"Sure, and it's the sun bating ye down ye'll be having," said Dinny. "Look at that, now!"

Dinny was gazing back at the pile of ancient buildings, and caught sight of a face in the shadow.

"Yes, I am trying to look," said Humphrey, with a sigh; "but my eyes are not used to the light."

"Sure, an' it's the captin, and he's kaping his of cn us," said Dinny to himself.

"Well, all right, captin, darlin'! I'm not going to run away."

"What place is this?"

"Sure, an' it's meself don't know, sor. Mebbe it's the palace that the American good payple built for Christyph Columbus. Mebbe," continued Dinny, "it's much owldier. Sure, and it shutes the captin, and we all live here whin we don't live somewhere else."

"Somewhere else?" said Humphrey, looking at Dinny wondering as he grasped his arm and signed to him to wait and give him breath.

"Well, I mane at say, sor, doing a bit o' business amongst the ships. Ah, look at her, thin, the darlin'!" he muttered, as a woman appeared for a moment among the lianas, held up her hand quickly to Dinny, and turned away.

"What woman was that?" said Humphrey, hastily.

"Woman, sor?"

"Yes; that woman who kissed her hand to you."

"An' did she kiss her hand to me, sor?"

"Yes, man, you must have seen."

"Sure, an' it must have been Mistress Greenheys, sor."

"Mistress Greenheys?"

"A widow lady, sor, whose husband had an accident one day wid his ship and got killed."

"And you know her?"

"We've been getting a little friendly lately," said Dinny, demurely. "There, sor, you're getting wake. Sit down on that old stone in the shade. Dead, it isn't iligant, the cutting upon it, for it's like a skull, but it's mighty convenient under that three. That better; and I'll go and ask Bart to bring ye a cigar."

"No, stop," said Humphrey. "I want to talk to you, man. That woman's husband was murdered, then?"

"Murdered? Faix, that's thrue. Sure, an' someone hit him a bit too hard, sor and he died."

"Murdered by these buccaneers?" said Humphrey, excitedly, and he looked wildly round him, when his eye lighted on the trim, picturesque figure of the little woman, who was intently watching them, and he saw her exchange a sign with his companion.

"The key of life—the great motive which moves the world," said Humphrey to himself, and he turned suddenly on Dinny, who had his hand to his mouth and looked sheepish.

"You love that woman," he said, sharply.

"Whisht, captin, dear?" said Dinny, softly; and then in a whisper, with a rueful leer, "sure, it isn't me, sor; it's the darlin's took a bit of a fancy to me."

"Yes, and you love her," said Humphrey.

"Och, what a way ye have of putting it, sor! Sure, and the poor critter lost her husband, and she's been living here ever since, and she isn't happy, and what could a boy do but try to comfort her?"

be absent. Dinny, who had been to him an hour before, had gone off on some duty with Dick Dulloch, and everything pointed to the fact that this was the opportunity so long sought.

He hesitated no longer; but after casting another glance round at the dark, shadowy nooks among the trees and ruins, all of which seemed purple-black in contrast with the blazing glare of sunshine, he softly slid himself back from the stone and dropped down among the undergrowth, and raised his head to peer among the leaves.

He obtained a good view of the great amphitheatre and the surrounding ruins, but all was still. No one had seen him move, and not a leaf was stirring.

Trifles seemed magnified at those moments into great matters, and with his nerves strung up to the highest pitch of tension he started, for all at once something moved away by the edge of the forest on his left. But it was only a great butterfly which fluttered over the baking stones, above which the air seemed to quiver, and then, with its brightly-painted wings casting a broad shadow, it crossed the ruined amphitheatre and was gone.

Humphrey Armstrong crept from behind his resting-place right to the shelter of the trees at the edge of the forest, and his spirits rose as he found how easy an evasion seemed to be. He had only to secure the co-operation of half a dozen of his men, take advantage of the listlessness of the buccaneers some such floty day as this, make their way down to the shore, seize a boat, and then coast along till a settlement was reached or a ship seen to take them aboard.

It was very simple, and it seemed easier and easier as he got farther away from the ruins and his prison. On his right the forest was dense, but the buccaneers had cut down and burned numbers of trees so as to keep them back from encroaching farther on the old buildings; and along here among the mossy stumps Humphrey Armstrong rept.

But it was easy—nothing seemed more simple. Already he saw himself round on the other side of the ruins, holding communication with his fellow-prisoners and making plans, when, to his great delight, he found that he had hit upon what was evidently a way to the other side of the ancient ruins; for he suddenly came upon a narrow passage through the dense forest growth, literally a doorway cut in the tangle of creepers and vines that were matted among the trees. It must have been an arduous task, but it had been thoroughly done—the vines having been hewn through, or in places half-divided and bent back, to go on interlacing at the sides, with the result that a maze-like path ran in and out among the trees.

The moment he was in this path the glare of the sunny day was exchanged for a dim greenish-hued twilight, which darkened with every step he took. Overhead a pencil of sunshine could be seen from time to time, but rarely, for the mighty forest trees interlaced their branches a hundred and fifty feet above his head, and the air was heavy with the moist odor of vegetable decay.

The forest path had evidently been rarely used of late, for the soft earth showed no imprints, the tender sickly growth of these deep shades had not been crushed; and as Humphrey realised these facts, he glanced back, to see how easily his trail could be followed—each step he had taken being either impressed in the vegetable soil or marked by the crushing down of moss or herb.

The sight of this impelled him to additional effort, so that he might gain some definite information about his people, and perhaps seek them by night, when once he had found the means of communication. In this spirit he was hurrying on when he came suddenly, in one of the darkest paths, upon a figure which barred his way, and it was with the addition of a rage-wrung savage exclamation that he uttered his captor's name.

There was a dead silence in the dark forest as these two stood face to face, buried, as it were, in a gloomy tunnel. After Humphrey's impatient ejaculation, drawn from him in his surprise, quite a minute elapsed; and then, half-mocking, came in a deep, low voice—

"Yes! Commodore Junk!"

Humphrey stood glaring down at the old staid in his path. He was tall and athletic and, in spite of his weakness and the fact that he had heard of the other's powers, he that he could seize this man, hurl him down and plant his foot upon his chest; for buccaneer captain was without weapons, stood looking up at him with one hand resting upon his hip, the other raised in a careless face, with a well-shaped sun-dex finger slightly impressing his forehead.

"Yes," he said again, mockingly, "Commodore Junk! Well, Humphrey Armstrong

The Man Who Can't Afford It.

BY H. C. FODGE.

Hurrah for the man who is able to say
In a manly, unblushing and sensible way,
"I can't afford it," when tempted to buy Whatever will distress him when pay-day is nigh.

Hurrah for that man. Though his way we neglect,
He has our profoundest, sincerest respect;
To him—be he ever a friend or a foe—
Unchecked admiration will all have to show.

And well he deserves it. He teaches the way
Of boldly ignoring what people may say
Or think it a matter which only concerns
The one who, for reasons, extravagance spurns.

We honor him truly—though seedy his clothes;
We love him—though little of fashion he shows;
We trust him unquestioningly—though poorer than clay;
We pray that our children may grow in his
way.

And isn't he happy! Just look in his face.
Of care or of worry there isn't a trace.
His conscience is clear. All the riches on earth
Can't give him the joy that right doing is worth.

No statesman, no ruler, no great soldier brave
Is prouder than he—who is nobly's slave.
"I cannot afford it." All praise to the man Who fearlessly says it and lives on that plan.

Maxims for a Young Man.

Make few promises.
Always speak the truth.
Keep good company or none.
Live up to your engagements.
Drink no intoxicating liquors.
Have no very intimate friends.
Never speak lightly of religion.
Be just before you are generous.
Earn your money before you spend it.
Keep your own secrets, if you have any.
Good character is above all things else.
Never listen to loose or idle conversation.
Never borrow money if you can possibly avoid it.
Make no haste to be rich if you would prosper.

In his address to the electors of Frontenac, Mr. Shibley, the Reform candidate in that county, urges that the government should supply free of charge all school books required by pupils attending public schools. That proposition is worthy of consideration, but once let the Tories in and they will soon make ducks and drakes of the provincial revenues and distribute the timber limits of the province on the Rykert and Robillard plan, so that the province will soon have no money to buy school books or anything else with.—Ot-

"Has he been sweating at you again?"
"Swearing! Bedad, Bart, he said things to me this morning as scorched the leaves of the threes yonder. If you go and look you can see 'em all crinkled up. He can swear!"

Bart sloughed away.
"It's a devil of a place!" muttered Dinny:
"and it would make a wonderful stone-quarry; but I'm getting sick of it, and feeling as if I should like to desert. Black Mazzard again!" he muttered, drawing in his breath sharply. "I wish his greatest inimpy would break his neck!"

Dinny walked sharply away, for the lieutenant seemed to have been gathering authority since the taking of the sloop, and lost no opportunity of showing it to all the crew.

Meanwhile, Bart had continued his way between the two piles of ruins, his path leading from the dazzling glow of the tropic sunshine into the subdued green twilight of the forest.

Here, at the end of some fifty paces, he came to the external portion of the building which formed Captain Humphrey's prison, and entering by a fairly well-preserved doorway, he raised a curtain, half-way down a corridor, passed through, and then came abreast of a recess, at the end of which was another broad hanging, which he drew aside, and entered the temple-chamber where Humphrey lay sleeping on a couch.

As Bart approached he became aware of a faint rustling sound, as of someone retreating from the window among the trees, and starting forward, he looked out. But all was still; not a long rope-like liana quivering, nor leaf crushed.

"Some monkey," muttered Bart, and turning back, he gazed down with a heavy frown at the frank, handsome face of the young officer, till he saw the features twitch, the eyes open and stare wonderingly into his; and once more the prisoner, roused by the presence of another gazing upon his sleeping face, suddenly sprang up.

"You here!"
"Yes, sir, I'm here," said Bart.

"What for? Why?"
"Nothing much, sir; only to tell you that you can go."

"Go?" cried the captain, excitedly.
"Yes, sir. Captain Junk's orders—where you like, so long as you don't try to escape."

"But I must escape!" cried Humphrey, angrily. "Tell the captain I will not give my parole."

"He don't want it, sir. You can go where you like, only if you try to escape you will be shot."

Humphrey Armstrong rose from where he had been lying, and made as if to go to the door, his face full of excitement, his eyes flashing, and his hands all of a tremble.

"Go!" he said, sharply. "Send that man who has acted as my servant."

"Servant!" muttered Bart, as he passed the curtain; "and him a prisoner! Dinny called himself his turnkey, but said as there was no door to lock. Here! ho! Dinny!"

"What do you want with him?" said a fierce voice; "and he turned, to find the lieutenant coming out of one of the ruined buildings.

"Prisoner wants him," said Bart, sturdily.
"Here, Dinny, Captain Armstrong wants you."

"Ay, ay," cried Dinny, who seemed to divine that Mazzard was about to stop him, and ran hastily on; while the lieutenant,
who was half-drunk, stood muttering, and then walked slowly away.

"Not so well, sor?"
"Wine—water!" panted Humphrey, hoarsely. "I tried to walk to the door and fell back here."

"Sure, an' ye're out of practice, sir," said Dinny, hastening to hold a vessel of water to the prisoner's lips. "That's better.
Ye've tak no exercise since ye've been bet-ther."

"Ah!" sighed Humphrey: "the deadly sickness has gone. This place is so lonely."

"Ay, 'tis, sor. One always feels like an outside cock bird who wants a mate."

"Sit down and talk to me."

"Sure an' I will, wid pleasure, sor," said Dinny, eagerly. "There's so few gentlemen to talk to here."

"Tell me about your commander."

"An' what'll I tell you about him?"

"What kind of a man is he?"

"Sure, and he's as handsome as such a little chap can be."

"Has he a wife here?"

"Woife, sor? Not he?"

"A troop of mistresses, then, or a harem?"

"Divil a bit sor. He's riddy to shoot the boys whiniver they take a new wife—Ingin or white. I believe he hates the whole sex, and thinks women is devils, sor. Why, he hit Black Mazzard once, sor, for asking him why he didn't choose a pretty gurl, and not live like a monk."

but there's two oshistles in the way, and one of 'em's Black Mazzard."

"Then, why not take her, Dinny?"

"Tak' her, sor?"

"Yes; from this wretched place. Escape."

"Whisht! Don't say that word aloud again, darlin', or maybe the captin'll get to hear. Sure, and I believe that the great big stone gods sh'ticking up all over the place gets to hear what's said and whispers it again to the captin, who always knows everything that goes on."

"Take her, and help me to escape," whispered Humphrey, earnestly.

"Whisht, man! How'd y'ur tongue. Is it wanting to see me hanging on one of the trees?"

"Yes. I am a rich man, and if you can get me away I'll reward you handsomely."

"Hark at him!" said Dinny, scornfully.

"Why, I should have to give up my share of what we've got shored up here. Why, sor, I darsay I'm a richer man than yourself. Es-escape! and after all I've sworn."

Dinny turned away and began cutting a stick.

"Tell me," said Humphrey, "are there many of my men here?"

"Jist twenty, sor."

"And how many are there of the pirates?"

Dinny laughed with his eyes half shut.

"Shure, sor, what d'ye tak' me for? Ye don't think I'm going to tell ye that?"

Humphrey sighed, and was silent for a time; but an intense desire to know about the place was burning within him, and he began to question his companion again.

"Are the prisoners in one of these old temples?"

"Yes. On the other side of the big pyri-mid yonder, sor; but ye can't get to them widout going a long way round."

"Are there many women here besides that Miss Greenheys?"

"Sure, yis, there is a dozen of 'em, sor.
Not half enough, but jist enough to kape
the min quarrelling; and there's been no end of bother about the women being kept in the place."

CHAPTER XXV.

Humphrey Armstrong was weaker from his wounds than he believed; but the change from being shut up in the dim temple-chamber with the great stone idol for company to the comparatively free open air of the forest, clearing, rapidly restored the elasticity of his nature, and gave him ample opportunities for studying the state of affairs.

He found that the buccaneers went out but seldom, and that when expeditions were made they would be fairly divided. At one time the captain would be in command, at another the lieutenant, so that their settle-

As far as he could judge, they were about a hundred in number, and great dilapidated chambers in the range of temples and palaces formed admirable barracks and means of defence, such as in time of need could easily be held against attack.

But Humphrey's great idea was escape;
and to accomplish this it seemed to him that his first need was to open up communication with his men.

This he determined to accomplish, for with the liberty given it seemed to be a very easy thing to walk to some heap of stones at the edge of the forest and there seat himself till he was unobserved, when he could quietly step into the dense thicket, and make his way to where his followers were imprisoned.

He had not long to wait, for it seemed that, after being closely watched for the first few days, the latitude allowed to him was greater. He had but to walk to the edge of the forest and wait, for the opportunity was sure to come.

Easy as it appeared though in theory, it proved less so in performance, and it was not till after several attempts that he felt one day sure of success.

It was soon after mid-day, when the great amphitheatre and the grotesquely ornamented ruins with their huge heads and shadowy trees were baking in the sun. The men who were often idling about had sought places where they could indulge in their siesta, and a silence as of the grave had fallen upon the place.

Humphrey Armstrong had walked to a pile of ruins beneath one of the trees, and seated himself upon a huge stone sculptured round with figures writhing in impossible attitudes, and one and all wearing highly ornamental head-dresses of feathers.

He lay back there as if half-drowsy with the heat, and with half-closed eyes looked watchfully round to see whether he was observed. But as far as he could see the place was utterly deserted. Bart, who was often here and there giving a kind of supervision to the buccaneers' settlement, and seeing that people from the barracks did not col-covering himself. "You allowed me at liberty, and I am exploring the place."

The buccaner looked in his eyes, with mocking smile growing more marked.

"Is this Captain Humphrey. Armst-the brave commander sent to exterminate me and mine, stooping to make a miserable excuse—to tell a lie?"

"A lie!" cried Humphrey, fiercely, as he took a step in advance.

"Yes, a lie!" said the buccaner, without moving a muscle. "You were trying to find some way by which you could escape."

"Well," cried Humphrey, passionately,
"I am a prisoner, I have refused to give my parole; I was trying to find some way of escape."

"That is more like you," said the buc-caneer, quietly. "Why? What do you require? Are you not well treated by my men?"

"You ask me why," cried Humphrey—
"me, whom you have defeated—disgraced, and whom you hold here a prisoner? You ask me why?"

"Yes. I whom you would have taken, and, if I had not died sword in hand, have hung at your yard-arm, and then gibbeted at the nearest post as a scarecrow."

He was silent and the buccaner went on—

"I have looked back, and I cannot see you placing a cabin at my disposal, seeing me nursed back from the brink of death, treated as a man would treat his wounded brother."

"No," cried Humphrey, quickly; "and why have you done all this when it would have been kinder to have slain me on that wretched day?"

"Why have I done this!" said the buc-caneer, with the color deepening in his swarthy face. "Ah, why have I done this!
Perhaps," he continued bitterly, "because I said to myself: 'This is a brave, true, English gentleman; and I find instead a man who does not hesitate to lie to screen his paltry effort to escape.'"

Humphrey made a menacing gesture; but the buccaner did not stir.

"Look here, sir," he continued. "I am in this place more powerful among my people than the king you serve. You smile;
but you will find that it is true."

"If I am not killed, sir, trying to make some effort to escape."

"Escape?" cried the buccaner, with his face lighting up. "Man, you have been warned before that you cannot escape. The forest beyond where we stand is one dense thicket through which no man can pass unless he cut his way inch by inch. It is one vast solitude, standing as it has stood since the world was made."

"Bart!" cried Humphrey, scornfully.

"A determined man could make his way."

"How far?" cried the buccaner. "A mile—two miles—and then, what is there?
—starvation, fever and death—lost in that vast wilderness. Even the Indians cannot penetrate those woods and mountains. Will you not take my word?"

"Would you take mine," said Humphrey, scornfully, "if our places were changed? I shall escape."

The buccaner smiled.

"You have an easy master, captain," he said, quietly; "but I would like to see you wear your chains more easily. Humphrey Armstrong, you cannot escape. There is only one way from this place, and that is by the sea, and there is no need to guard that.
Look here," he cried, laying his hand upon the prisoner's arm, "you have been planning this for days and days. You have lain out yonder upon that stone by the old palace, calculating how you could creep away; and you found your opportunity to-day, when you said to yourself, 'These people are all asleep now, and I will find my way round to where my men are prisoners.'"

As he spoke Humphrey changed color and winced, for the buccaner seemed to have read his every thought.

"And then you came upon this path through the forest, and you felt that this was the way to freedom."

"Are you a devil?" cried Humphrey, excitely.

"Perhaps," was the mocking reply.
"Perhaps only the great butterfly you watched before you started, as it lazily winged its way among the broken stones."

Humphrey uttered an exclamation, and gazed wildly in the dark, mocking eyes.

"Never mind what I am, captain, but pray understand this—you cannot escape from here. When you think you are most alone, there are eyes upon you which see your every act, and your movements are all known."

"I will not believe it," cried Humphrey, angrily.

"Then disbelieve it; but it is true.
tell you there is no escape, man. You may get away a few miles perhaps, but every step you take bristles with the threatening of death. So be warned, and bear you

"And then?" cried Humphrey, excitedly. "What then?" "Ah, yes," said the buccaneer, who assumed not to have heard his words, "you are still weak. That flush in your face is the flush of fever, and you are low and excited."

"Dog! You are mocking me!" cried Humphrey, furiously, for he felt the truth of every word that had been said, and his impotence maddened him.

"Dog!" cried the buccaneer as furiously. "Yes; wretched cut-throat—murderer," cried Humphrey—"miserable wretch, whom I could strangle where you stand!"

The buccaneer turned of a sallow pallor, his brow knit, his eyes flashed, and his chest heaved, as he stood glaring at Humphrey; but the sudden storm of passion passed away, and with a smile of pity he said softly— "You call names like a petulant boy. Come, I am not angry with you, let us go back to your room. The heat of this place is too much for you, and to-morrow you will be down with fever."

"Bah!" ejaculated Humphrey, angrily. "It is true," said the buccaneer. "Come."

"There is something behind all this," cried the young man, excitedly. "We are alone here. I am the stronger; and, in spite of your boasting, there is no one here to help. You shall speak out, and tell me what this means."

His gesture was threatening now; but the buccaneer did not stir.

"I am not alone," he said, quietly. "I never am without someone to protect me. But there, you shall be answered. Why have I had you tended as I have? Well, suppose I have said to myself, 'Here is a brave man who should be one of us.'"

"One of you?" cried Humphrey, with a scornful laugh.

"Suppose," continued the buccaneer, with his nether lip quivering slightly, "I had said to myself, 'You are alone here. Your men obey you, but you have no friends among them—no companions whom you can trust. Why not make this man your friend?'"

Humphrey smiled, and the buccaneer's lip twitched slightly as he continued—

"You are fevered and disappointed now, and I shall not heed your words. I tell you once for all that you must accept your fate here as others have accepted theirs. I need not tell you that for one to escape from here would be to bring ruin upon all. Hence every one is his brother's guardian; and the Indians for hundreds of miles around, at first our enemies till they felt my power, are now my faithful friends."

Humphrey laughed mockingly.

"You laugh, sir. Well, it is the laugh of ignorance, as you will find. It is no idle boast when I say that I am king here over my people, and the tribes to north and south."

"The Indians too?" said Humphrey. "Yes, the Indians too, as you found to your cost."

"To my cost?"

"To your cost. Your ship was in my way. You troubled me; and your people had to be removed. Well, they were removed."

"The treacherous hounds!" cried Humphrey, grinding his teeth as he recalled the action of the two Indians, and their escape.

"Treacherous! No. You would have employed men to betray me; it was but fighting you with your own weapons, sir; and these you call treacherous hounds were true, brave fellows who risked their life to save me and mine."

Humphrey was silent.

"Come, Captain Armstrong; you will suffer bitterly for this. There are chills and fevers in the depths of this forest which seize on strangers like you, especially upon those weakened by their wounds, and I do not want to lose the officer and gentleman who is to my friend and help here, where I am, as it were, alone."

"Your friend and help!" said Humphrey, haughtily. "I am your prisoner, sir; but you forget to whom you are speaking. How dare you ask me to link my fate with that of your cut-throat band—to share with you life or plunder and disgrace, with the loss at the yard-arm of every ship in His Majesty's Navy waiting to end your miserable career? I tell you—I tell you—" made a clutch at the nearest branch to himself, for his head swam, black spots a mist and strangely blurred seemed descending from above to form a veil before his eyes. He recovered for a moment, long enough to re-hand stretched out to save him, all was blank, and with a hoarse could have fallen heavily but for arms that caught him, held him a few moments, and then a faint, sigh was heard in the stillness of the night, as Humphrey Armstrong was

 and me?" said a deep low voice; and
 and began started as if from a dream,
 "face hardening, and the wrinkles had been smoothed reappearing deep-

"You here, Bart?"

"Ay, I'm here."

"Watching me?"

"Ay, watching of you."

The buccancer rose and gave the interlop-er an angry look.

"Well, why not?" said Bart. "How did I know what he'd do?"

"And you've seen and heard all?"

"Everything," said Bart, coolly.

"When I told you to be within hearing only if I whistled or called."

"What's the use of that when a blow or a stab would stop them both?"

"Bart, I—"

"Go on, I don't mind," said Bart, quietly, "I want to live, and if you want to come to harm that would be the end of me."

The buccancer gave an impatient stamp, but Bart paid no heed.

"Give me a lift up and I'll carry him back," he said quietly.

All this was done, and Dinny summoned, so that when, an hour later, Humphrey unclosed his eyes, it was with his head throbb-ing with fever, a wild, half-delirious dream-ingness troubling his brain, and the great stone image glaring down at him through the dim green twilight of the prison room.

It was a bitter experience for the prisoner to find that he had overrated his powers.
 The effort, the excitement, and the malaria of the forest prostrated him for a fortnight, and at the end of that time he found that he was in no condition to make a further attempt at securing the means of escape.

He lay in his gloomy chamber thinking over the buccancer's insolent proposal, and fully expected that he would resent the way in which it had been received; but to his surprise he received the greatest attention, and wine, fruit, and various delicacies that had evidently come from the stores of some well-found ship were placed before him to tempt his appetite.

Dinny was his regular attendant, and always cheery and ready to help him in every way; but no more was said for a time respecting an escape, though Humphrey was waiting his time; for after lying for hours, day after day, debating his position, he came to the conclusion that if he did escape it must be through this light-spirited Irishman.

His captor did not come to him as far as he knew; but he had a suspicion that more than once the buccancer had been watching from some point or another unknown to him.
 But one day a message was brought by Bart, who entered the gloomy chamber and in his short, half-sarcastic way thus delivered himself—

"Orders from the skipper, sir."

"Orders from your captain?" said Humphrey, flushing.

"To say that he is waiting for your answer, sir."

"My answer, man! I gave him my answer."

"And that he can wait any time; but a message from you that you want to see him will bring him here."

"There is no other answer," said Humphrey, coldly.

"Better not say that," said Bart, after standing gazing at the prisoner for some time.

"What do you mean?" cried Humphrey, haughtily.

"Don't know. What am I to say to the captain?"

"I have told you. There is no answer," said Humphrey, coldly, and he turned away, but lay listening intently, for it struck him that he had heard a rustle in the great stone corridor without, as if someone had been listening, but the thick carpet-like curtain fell, and he heard no more, only lay watching the faint rays of light which descended through the dense foliage of the trees, as some breeze waved them softly, far on high,
 and slightly relieved the prevailing gloom.

Bart's visit had started a current of thought which was once more running strongly when Dinny entered with a basket of the delicious little grapes which grow wild in the sunny open parts of the mountain slopes.

"There, sir," he said, "and all me own picking, except about half of them which Mistress Greenheys sint for ye. Will ye take a few bunches now?"

Napanee District Meeting.

On Tuesday May 27th at 10 o'clock the annual meeting of the Napanee District held its session in the Eastern Methodist church in Napanee.

This is one of the eleven districts of the Bay of Quinte Conference and has twelve circuits, sixteen ministers and preachers two of whom are superannuates and one probationer. There are no missions on this district, hence no missionary money expended here.

The Rev. A. B. Chambers L. L. B., chairman of the district presided. After singing Rev. A. Campbell the financial secretary read a portion of scripture and Rev. W. H. Peake and D. O. Crossley led in prayer.

Rev. W. J. Young was elected by ballot as secretary and Rev. H. I. Allen was chosen as his assistant.

The chairman made reference to the year past in which so many suffered by the epidemic which swept over this continent making so many vacant places in homes of sorrow. The shadow of death has been over his home in the loss of a dear brother, Rev. A. C. Chambers of the Montreal Conference.

On Examination all the ministers stood approved in their moral and religious character.

Rev. W. D. Harrison a probationer of one years standing passed a very satisfactory examination and was recommended to be continued in the work.

Rev. David Wilson was continued in superannuated relation.

Rev. Eli Woodcock was recommended to the active work should a suitable charge be obtained.

Rev. J. B. Clarkson was granted superannuated relation on account of throat difficulty disabling him for the active work.

On Wednesday the second day the laymen appointed by the different circuits were present as follows: Messrs W. Hall, A. L. Morden, Napanee; W. Aylsworth, Deseronto; M. N. Van Morven; J. B. Aylsworth and A. V. Newburgh; W. A. Hogle, Odessa; Hogle, Bath; Geo. Phippin, Aylsworth; Jas. Joyce, Hay Bay; Ira Gains, Selby; Jas. Lewis, Wilton; Lucas, Yarker.

The statistical returns were found to be in a very favorable condition considering the times of financial depression. Many of the circuits were of last year. There was an increase in membership of over one hundred.

COUNTY COUNCIL.—The regular June session of the County Council will open on Tuesday, June 10th, at 2 p.m.

MARRIAGE NOTICES.—From henceforth the sum of fifty cents will be charged for the insertion of marriage notices.

A HINT TO ELECTORS.—Mark your ballot where the red printing is. That is for Aylsworth the supporter of honest government.

BAND CONCERT. The people of Napanee were highly pleased with the band concert given by Gorton's minstrele. They are certainly exceedingly fine musicians.

OATS.—The Downey Co. will pay the very highest price for 10,000 bushels oats; immediate delivery. Farmers should take note of this and not be deceived by agents.

WESTERN CHURCH.—The pastor will preach at both services. Morning subject, "The proposed union of the Eastern and Western churches." Evening subject, "Summer Sins."

A HANDSHIP.—Several valuable cattle throughout this section are dying off by apoplexy. The symptoms show about twenty-four hours after coming in. Mr. James Garratt lost a valuable cow this week.

PREPARING FOR CAMP.—Those who desire to join No. 6 company for the purpose of going to camp are requested to be at the Town Hall on Monday evening next. Only six men are required to fill the company. It is expected the company will parade on Friday of next week.

SOME FRIGHTENED.—The heavy black cloud tipped with crimson which arose from the west on Monday evening last frightened several of our townspeople, who thought that some terrible calamity was about to befall us. It was only a heavy rain cloud with the setting sun reflected upon it.

OUR TOWN.—A few facts regarding our town may be of interest to our readers. In 1888 the total assessment was $987,788; in 1889 it was $962,836 and for this year it is $949,286. In 1888 the population was 3,201, in 1889 it was 3,074 and in the present year is 3,137. These figures were obtained from the assessment roll.

A GRAND PROSPECT.—Reports just in from sections of country to Regina, Moosomin, Gunboro, Peum Creek, Deloraine and Brandon, showing an increase of about twenty per cent in acreage under crop, farmers in good spirits over prospects for large yield, grain well rooted, and promises for good crops could not be better.

ROYAL HAND BELL RINGERS.—On Friday evening last the Royal Hand Bell Ringers gave an entertainment in the opera house. The house was well filled. The music was good and was highly appreciated by those in attendance. Mr. Hayward the lightning manipulator of the dulcimer, zylphone and metallaphone was exceptionally good.

A BEAUTIFUL TOWN.—Napanee has some of the most beautiful residences that can be found in this part of the country. The townspeople have taken particular interest in beautifying their premises and their labors have been rewarded. We would like to see others falling into line so that by Dominion day the fine appearance of our town may long be remembered by those who attend the celebration on that day.

DIED IN OREGON.—On Saturday afternoon last Mr. H. R. Spencer, grocer, received a telegram from the Cascade mountains, Oregon, that Charles, his only brother, had died. The death was very sudden for Mr. Spencer had just heard from him but a few days ago that he was in better royal temples of temperance no. 3 will elect their officers for the ensuing six months next Tuesday evening. A full attendance is requested.

DEATH OF A FORMER RESIDENT.—Word has been received from Denver, Col., that Jane Fredman, wife of Robert E. Perry, died on the 12th inst. She was a former resident of this county.

FOR FISHERMEN.—Captain Goughers, of Bath, one of the most skillful fishermen in the district, says that the recent heavy gale means "good-bye to the whitefish in the bay" as they have all been driven out into the lake.

MISINFORMED.—In our local columns last week we published an item regarding some young men under the heading "Well Ducked." In this it seems we were misinformed for the parties in question did not get drunk as was told us.

A WARNING.—Be it known unto you, oh, Dr. Meacham, that in a recent campaign for the Local Legislature, in which the Conservative candidate was successful, a coffin with almost the same inscription upon it, was one of the emblems used in a torchlight procession. Shortly after this and during the first session of the House that member died.

AN OLD SAYING FULFILLED.—The old proverb "Where there is little, little is expected" was most clearly demonstrated on Saturday afternoon last on the part of those who were the instigators of and implicated in the "coffin act." The smallest boy attending the public school would have thought it beneath him to have had anything to do with such an act.

DOUBLE TRACK.—A large number of scrapers and dump carts arrived this week to be used in the G. T. R. double tracking. Work is progressing very favorably west of this station. About all the mason work between here and Belleville has been completed, although in several instances where work was being carried on from three to four feet of water had to be pumped out from ditches which had become filled by the rains.

THE WATERWORKS.—The pipelaying has been completed in connection with the waterworks. Workmen are now engaged in the erection of a reservoir at the upper end of East street. It will be over 16 feet in circumference and stand 100 feet high. It is estimated to hold about 150,000 gallons of water. The foundation is being laid with stone and cement two feet thick to a depth of about 6 feet, and on that will be erected the sheet iron column. It will be made thoroughly secure.

BLACK KNOT.—There is too little attention paid to the law respecting black knot on fruit trees. Wherever affection of this kind is found in the garden or in the orchard, it should be properly and promptly treated, either in the removal of the knot where little exists, or the destruction of the tree where it has appeared so plentifully as to make its removal impossible. It is to the interest of every person having fruit trees as well as to the welfare of his neighbor's trees to get out the knot.

SOME OF THE NAMES.—In our account of "Lo" last week space would not permit our giving the names of some who are well known to our townspeople who took part in the play. Mr. J. C. Greenwood played Leo. Mr. Wm. Middleton took three parts, and the R. M. C. played and Cetebo. Mr. James Galloway took the role of Sergt. Bloodswinger and Mr. C. N. Raymond played Quipp. Each person ably sustained their reputation, and did justice to their parts.

LITERARY NOTES.—"Leaders on the Turf" will be the subject of the four-page Supplement in the number of Harper's Weekly to be published May 28th. Pictures of famous race-horses, and portraits of Leonard W. Jerome, August Belmont, M. F. Dwyer, and other prominent owners of thorough-breds, will accompany the article. The same number will also contain illustrations of incidents during the cruise of the squadron of evolution, and a double-page view of the Garfield Monument which is to be dedicated on Memorial Day.

A TEST.—A partial test of the waterworks was made on Thursday afternoon last. A hose was attached to the hydrant on Dundas street, between John and Centre streets and run down John street. Another was attached to the hose at the corner of John and Dundas streets and run along Dundas to Centre street. Another short one was attached to the hydrant at the corner of Dundas and Centre streets. Attached to each was a nozzle of two inches, one and a half inches, and one inch respectively, and good streams were played through each. The townspeople were satisfied with the streams thrown, but a more thorough test will be made in a short time.

no further particulars have as yet been received. It was a shock to Mr. Spencer.

A MASS MEETING.—On Thursday afternoon last a mass meeting was held in the opera house, called by the Conservative committee. There was quite a large attendance and the Doctor thought he had everything all his own way. It happened, however, that Mr. W. S. Herrington was in the hall and took the platform. He had not been speaking very long before Dr. Meacham began to get restless. Later on he wished he was out of the place, for if ever a man got roasted he did. Roasted! he was burned to a crisp, and the Conservative party was glad when the meeting was over and their candidate could be taken from the hall.

NOMINATIONS.—On Thursday forenoon the nomination of candidates for the Legislative Assembly for the county of Lennox was held at the Court House. Mr. Bowen E. Aylsworth was nominated by Irvine Parks, Warden of the county, and seconded by D. W. Allison, ex-M. P. W. W. Meacham was nominated by Dr. Rutan, and seconded by Louis D. Amey. A poll was demanded on behalf of Mr. Aylsworth by J. H. Madden, barrister, &c. The nomination of candidates for the Legislative Assembly for the county of Addington was held in Pinkle's hall, Newburgh. Frank A. Halliday was nominated by J. B. Aylsworth, Reeve of Newburgh, and seconded by Leonard Wagar, Reeve of Sheffield. James Reid was nominated by James Haydon, of Camden East, and seconded by J. H. Godfrey, of Hinchinbrook.

MILITARY CAMP.—On Tuesday June 17th the soldiers in districts No. 3 and 4 will go into camp at Barriefield common, with 2,000 men. The troops to go under canvas are the 4th regiment of cavalry, Kingston, in command of Lt. Col. Duff. Prescott troop of cavalry, in command of Major Raney. Durham field battery, Major McLean, of Port Hope. Ottawa field battery—Major Stewart. Gananogue field battery—Lt. Col. Mackenzie. Two gun detachments—"A" battery, R. C. A. The artillery will be brigaded under the command of Lt. Col. Cotton, assistant inspector of artillery. The infantry corps ordered out are: 45th battalion, Bowmanville, Lt. Col. Cubitt, 47th battalion, Lt. Col. Hunter. 41st battalion, Lt. Col. Cole. 55th battalion, Cornwall, Lt. Col. Breden. The staff officers will be published later.

THE CELEBRATION.—Arrangements for the Dominion day celebration are progressing and the prospects are that Napanee has never had such a demonstration as will be held on that day. Many features have been secured which have never been here before. Special rates have been secured by all railway and steamboat lines and if the day is favorable it is expected that thousands of people will be in town on that day. The programme for the day is an attractive one. In the forenoon a prosperous trades procession will be held in which about fifty of our merchants will participate, besides baseball and bicycle clubs, firemen and other local societies. Several first-class bands have been secured, including the ladies' brass band of Demorestville, Gananogue Carriage Works band, 16th Batt. and citizens bands of Picton and the 47th Batt. band of Napanee, which are all of a high standard. These bands will be here for the procession. During the afternoon baseball matches will be played between clubs from Kingston, Belleville, Napanee and Newburgh. Several first class horses will be here for the races. The famous trotting dog "Doo" will trot any horse under twelve hands high. In the evening the grounds will be illuminated by electric light. Dancing will be the leading feature for which a first-class string band has been secured.

A Beautiful Canadian Story.

The Graphic, Chicago's popular illustrated weekly, is publishing a beautiful story of Canadian life, by Mrs. Mary Hartwell Catherwood, author of the famous "Romance of Dollard," the "Story of Tony" and other charming chapters of Canadian history and tradition. The Graphic story is entitled the "Children of Ha Ha Bay," the scene being laid successively near St. Alexis, Chicoutimi and Tadoussac. Marie, a fair orphan girl; her grandfather, a hermit, at Chicoutimi; Ignace, a brave young forester, and Justine, his sister, are the well-drawn characters in this, the best of Mrs. Catherwood's shorter stories. The three issues containing this beautiful sketch, (finely illustrated by Mr. A. B. Davies), may be obtained of most newsdealers or they will be mailed by the publishers on receipt of 30 cents.

Minard's Liniment cures Dandruff.

Rev. D. O. Cragley was elected as ministerial representation to bath school conference committee A. V. Price as lay representative.

Rev. W. J. Young was elected stationing committee and Mr. W. as representative to the mission committee.

The names of laymen elected representatives to conference were as follows: Mr. W. F. Hall, A. L. Morden, W. R. A. worth, R. H. Bogart, J. B. Aylsworth, V. Price, Dennis Lucas, John Hogle, Fra Wilson, Wm. Hogle, Benj. Davis, L. Bennett, H. V. Fralick, G. M. Elliott, W. T. Gibbard.

A memorial on temperance was given to a committee named as follows: Rev. W. H. Peake, Mr. Ira B. Hudgins, and A. V. Price. A resolution was presented by them to the district meeting encouraging all Methodist ministers and people to aid in the election of true and tried temperance men as our representatives to Parliament.

Another memorial on "Prison Reform" was placed in the hands of Messrs. Morden, Hogle and Aylsworth as a committee for consideration. They presented a resolution favoring reform which was adopted by the meeting.

A resolution of sympathy was presented in reference to the wife of Rev. M. J. Bates who died in February last at Riverdale, So. California.

On Tuesday evening the ministers spent a very pleasant hour and were hospitably entertained at the Eastern Methodist parsonage by the kindness of Rev. Mr. Chambers, Mrs. Chambers and family.

The very pleasing session of this district meeting closed with the benediction by the chairman and all had hope that they might see him next presiding in the chair of the annual conference to meet next week, June 5th at Cobourg.

LAMB—STERLING.—At the residence of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Hook, on the 24th May, by Rev. D. O. Cragley, William Lamb, of Newburgh, to Anley Sterling, of Napanee Mills.

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's SOOTHING SYRUP. For children teething its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhoea, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP for children teething is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price, 25 cents a bottle. Secure and ask for Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP, and take no other. 517

A regular meeting of Napanee Lodge will be held in the hall, located at Brock, on Tuesday evening next, June 3rd, at 8 o'clock. F. Burrows will exhibit a set of Anatomical Charts and deliver an interesting lecture thereon. A full attendance is requested.

 SOLVED.

I that rustic path was treading, when the sun its rays were shedding--beaming, gleaming, fairly streaming through the trees;
 and I watched the streamlet glistening, as entranced, I there was listening to the melting, merry music on the breeze, when beneath a tree reclining, where no ray of sun was shining, lo! I saw a fellow being on the ground!
 Though no other feature shifted,
 quickly he his eyes uplifted--upward lifted, as he wildly looked around, I said approaching, "do not charge me with encroaching-- are you waiting for some messenger of news?" But no other words he uttered, and no other sentence muttered, save--

1890 SPRING. 1890

When an intelligent farmer wants to purchase an implement of any kind the first question that naturally arises in his mind is, "Where can I get the best?" as a poor implement is dear at any price.

"The Napanee Agricultural Works"

Have solved the question for the farmers of these counties by manufacturing for the season of 1890.

100 Single Mowers, 50 Single Reapers, 10 Combined Reapers, 40 Horse Rakes, 75 Corn Cultivators, 18 Straw Cutters, 100 Dominion Plows, 50 2 mould-board Gang Plows, 20 Two-horse Cultivators, besides Wind Mills, Harrows, Rollers, etc., which we warrant each the best of their kind. Our Single Reaper has been greatly improved, and will be found the best in the world. We have attached a ea Harvester to our Single Mower at a cost of $15, which will harvest peas as easily as mowing hay. This issomething new. Call and examine.

Right here let me say: Buy home make when you can get a good article. The money circulates in your own county. Buy a foreign make and you send the money away, and then blame the government because money is not in circulation at home. You might as well expect an empty bag to stand upright.
 I want the farmers to remember that there would be in circulation in these counties $100,000 to-day more than there is but for this practice of buying machines made away from home. I have more to say, postpone until next issue.

thoro as she was approaching the fat Bath on Monday. The lad was led by the gangway, when one of the ders was lowered by a boat hand, letting down with stunning force. Fortunately ruck him sidewise. His face was bac-terated and bruised.

In Monday afternoon an accident happed at Tweed by which a man named ames Lennox, employed by Mr. Graham, narrowly escaped being killed. While under the influence of liquor he was driving a spirited team of horses up the main street. He lost control of them, was thrown out of the rig, and rolled under the wagon, the wheels of which passed over him. Lennox was picked up in an unconscious state. He soon recovered and was assisted to a friend's house. He was not as badly injured as supposed.

An unsuccessful attempt was made on Monday night to burglarize the Big Store Deseronto. The burglars attempted to enter through a window on the east side, and with that end in view forced off a wooden shutter, broke the glass, but found themselves confronted with strong iron bars inside which effectually prevented any further ingress. A number of these gentry are operating in the district, and it is just as well to be ready to give them a warm reception when they appear upon the scene.

Capt. E. A. E. Halliwell, of the Prince Edward cavalry, a corporal in "A" company of the Midland battalion, who was shot five times at the famous charge of Batoche, went to Oklahoma a year ago last April with Major Crozier, and was with the boomers when they first entered that "land of promise." He speculated in land, but on finding that he could not hold it without taking the oath of allegiance he went to Texas and engaged as principal of a county school. He has been engaged again in a similar position, to begin on Sept. 1st next, but is now home to go to camp in June with his troop.

Gents. Having used MINARD'S LINattest to its being the best thing I know of for horseflesh. In the family, we have used it for every purpose that a liniment is adapted for, it being recommended to us by the late Dr. J. L. R. Webster. Personally I find it the best allayer of neuralgic pain

I have ever used.

Prof. Dorenwend's Greeting.

To all whom it may concern:

Beautiful women and handsome men are admired and command attention. How many are there who would be beautiful or handsome had they but a sufficiency of hair.

LADIES, all the dress, jewelry and other ornaments are naught if the hair is scraggy or worn out looking. It requires a fine hair goods style to beautify and tone down the face. This, with the plainest possible dress, will create a charming and attractive presence.

GENTLEMEN, there are thousands of you with bald tops, who have probably never thought of artificial coverings, but where the hair refuses to return, why not get a toupee? Think of this.

I want you all to call at my show rooms in the hotel and see my goods, and if they are not all that I claim for them I will give you the goods free of charge. Ladies' Bangs in an immense variety of styles, sizes and shades. Crimpieces in long and short hair, Frontpieces, Wigs, Switches, etc.; Gents' Wigs, Toupees, etc. Remember that the Prof. will be at the Paisley House on Tuesday, June 3d. Drop in and see him. 25b
